Washisoton, August 13.—It is not improbable that the Senate, for the first time in many years, will indulge in a dead-lock this week. Notice has been given that the fisheries treaty will be pushed to a final vote within three or four days, and the Democratic Senators talk of refraining from acting upon Mr. Morgan's motion to postpone further consideration until December next, which motion must be voted on before another move can be taken, and it will require a full attendance of Republican Senators in order to defeat the proposition. on before another move can be taken and it will require a full attendance of Republican Senators in order to defeat the proposition. should the Democrats persist in demanding a quorum, a final vote may be diverted until next week. The conference report on the naval appropriation bill is expected to-day and this may precipitate considerable debate. The Senate demands that the heavy armored cruiser, to cost $3,500,000, exclusive of armament, which was put in the bill by the House, shall be stricken out, and three light cruisers substituted at a cost of seven hundred thousand dollars each exclusive of armament. The Senate, it is believed, will stand firm in its position and demand with vigor the three light ships in place of the one heavy gun boat, and there may be other conferences ordered. The Senate does not expect the deficiency appropriation bill to come over from the Honse till the end of the week.

over from the Honse till the end of the week.

There are pending before the House three appropriation bills, only one of which has not received preliminary action. The general deficiency bill is almost completed and the naval and army bills are in conforence and will come up during the week some time. If the House agrees to the Senate amendment to the army bill, the fortifications appropriation bill, which is now on the House calendar, will never be taken up. Chairman Townshend, of the House Committeee on Military Affairs, has called a meeting of the House conferees on the army bill for to-day, and says it is probable that the conference will agree to the Senate amendments (Hawley's heavy ordinance) to the army bill, with some further amendmends, and that the House will settle the bebate between the committees on Military Affairs and Appropriations as to which shall have jurisdiction over the fortification appropriation bill, and that it will be determined in favor of the former.

This is District of Columbia day in the House, but as there are no measures of pressing importance for the District Committee to put upon their passage, the General Deficiency bill will probably be taken pressing importance for the District Committee to put upon their passage, the General (Deliciency bill will probably be taken up. There remains but little of the allotted time to debate the French spoliation claims in this measure, and the bill can be passed within a few hours, unless a point of no quorum should be raised when a vote is called for on the French spoliations. If a point of no quorum is raised, a dead-lock may ensue. Tuesday has been made a special order for the senate bill restricting Chinese immigration and there is no disposition to delay consideration of that measure as the House seems to there is no disposition to delay considera-tion of that measure as the House seems to be almost unanimously in favor of it. There appears to be a disposi-tion on the part of the House to take things was and wait for the Senate tariff bill.

tion on the part of the House to take things easy and wait for the Senate tariff bill.

Chairman Allison, of the sub-committee of the Senate Committee on Finance, preparing the tariff bill, says the hearings which are being given to the various industries have not yet closed, and that there is no probability of the bill going to the Senate this week. It will create no surprise in the Senate among those who are best posted on the subject, if the tariff bill does come for debate before the first of September, and most of the old Senators are predicting that the adjournment will not be had until sometime in October.

Shenandoan, lows, August 13.—Great excitement still prevails here over the terrible tragedies of Saturday night. Hundreds of people came to the city yesterday from the surrounding country by special trains to visit the scene of the conflict. Continued streams of people have been passing all day to and from the old Gallup residence to view the body of the dead murderer as it lay in the city fire engine house. The lateness of the hour prevented, full particulars of the murder and the events following it from being sent out Saturday night. At the home of the Gallup family, consisting of old Samuel Gallup, his wife. Frank and Charlie, their two sons, Frank's wife and some small children, a family row was in progress about nine o'clock Saturday evening. Frank and Charlie were beating the old man, when F. J. Pine, a hardware merchant of this place. Wm. Reinig, a drug clerk, and Mr. Patterson, a traveling msn, went to the Gallup house to see what the trouble was and to assist in restoring peace. Frank Gallup, without any provocation or warning, advanced from the house, and drawing a revolver, said: "What do you want here? Take that, d—n you." He fired a shot, which entered Pine's breast chove the heart, killing him almost instantly. Those with entered Pine's breast chove the heart, killing him almost instantly. capturing him.

On the arrival of the militia at the scene a line was formed around the Gallup place, which included a garden containing some trees and shrubbery. In a short time Frank Gallup was heard by one of the guards in the rear of the house calling from the shrubbery in the garden to his wife in the house. At the same time old man Gallup and his wife were assuring those in front of the house that their son Frank want there, but had fled, and in vited them to enter and scarch the house, and satisfy themselves of the truth of their statements. Having no suspicion of treachery, Bert Rice, Dave Campbell, T. E. Patterson, a Chicago traveling man, T. H. Winfrev and others of the militia company and citizens went to the house. They had searched the cellar, answere coming out of it, when Frank Gallug appeared, armed with two revolvers. Dave Campbell, who was unarmed, grappled with him at the door, and received a probably fatal wound in the neck from the desperador's revolver. Standing over the prostrate form of Campbell, the desperador him by one of the women from within the house and commenced an indiscriminate fire upon those inside. His next shot took effect on T. H. Winfrey, wounding him in the leg slightly. He then started to run toward the rear of the house and encountered militiaman Bert Rice. Both fired almost at the same instant. Rice's shot, it seems, did not take effect, but the shot from Gallup's pistol entered Rices breast and he died in a few moments. arrival of the militia at the scene Rice's shot, it seems, did not take effect, but the shot from Gallup's pistol entered Rices breast and he died in a few moments. Gallup then encountered Morris Fletcher, another militiaman, who raised his gun under his arm, he being too close to bring it to his shoulder. With the muzzle almost touching Gallup's back, he fired. The ball passed clear through Gallup's body. It was not yet known that Gallup was dead and preparations were continued for a closer investigation and to prevent any further loss of life by the treachery of the other members of the family.
